POPE FRANCIS
GENERAL AUDIENCE
Paul VI Audience Hall
Wednesday, 5 February 2020

Dear Brothers and Sisters: In our continuing catechesis on the Beatitudes in Matthew's Gospel, we consider the first of the eight proclamations: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Mt 5:3). Matthew's account, unlike Luke's, speaks of the "poor in spirit".

Here "spirit", recalling the breath of life that God gave to Adam, refers to the most intimate part of our being. The poor in spirit sense their poverty and dependency on God at this innermost level, whereas the proud of heart regard themselves as self-sufficient, hating whatever reminds them of the fragility of the human condition. To be poor in spirit is to be aware of our frailty, to accept our mistakes and be able to ask forgiveness. This then becomes an occasion of grace leading us to God's kingdom. In contrast to worldly power, God's strength is seen in loving mercy. Christ himself shows this by preferring the good of others, even to the point of shedding his blood for us. We will be blessed if we both accept the poverty of our being and strive to imitate the poverty of Jesus in loving service of our neighbor.
